Developers submit 4 separate requests for total of 12 high-rises

Developers wasted no time in filing requests for preliminary site plan approvals in the county's new C-4 Commercial Resort District. At Thursday's meeting of the planning commission, four separate requests, representing 12 high-rise towers appeared on the agenda. Ten tower projects were given the go ahead and one request from the Russell Joshua Elliot Trust was postponed. Building official Mickey Lagasse said the applications were filed after the Supervisors approved the district on Monday. Final site plans will need to be approved before any construction can begin.

T & K's L.L.C., a partnership of the Terry Ladner family, Kudo Development and Philip Canter, were given the go ahead to proceed with plans for a four tower complex which will be located on

Crawfish Cookoff

The 16th annual Crawfish Cook-Off is this Saturday at the Jourdan River Steamer.

16th Annual Crawfish Cook-off is Saturday, May 14 in the Kiln

More than 20 teams from all over the south will compete to find out who cooks the best darn crawfish in the south. Will it be the Mallini's Tail Pinchers, Tongue Candy from Diamondhead, The Broke Spoke from Kiln, or one of the many others? These teams from Louisiana and Mississippi go all out with one thing in mind, 1st Place.

Besides just eating all the crawfish you can handle we will have live music, dancing, crawfish races, men's and women's crawfish eating contest, people's choice award, showmanship award, and judges crowning winners of the crawfish cook-off. Each team submits one member to be a judge and all the judges do a blind taste to determine the winners.

All of the spectators are allowed to vote for a popular favorite. This also makes the teams compete for the spectator's votes in all different ways.

This unique event started off between a couple of guys bragging that they could cook the best crawfish, but it quickly grew into something far bigger than bragging rights. Debby Plauche, owner of Cafe Reef restaurant in Waveland, and Hank Plauche, GM of Jourdan River Steamer restaurant in Kiln, have been putting on this festival ever since.

The cook-off seems to have found universal appeal; bankers, lawyers, bricklayers, bikers, politicians it doesn't matter everyone is out to enjoy the crawfish and have a good time.

The event will be held at the Coast's newest hot spot, The Jourdan River Steamer

Restaurant in Kiln. Cocktails and beer will be served at the event, but no ice chest or drinks will be allowed onto the property. There are still a couple of team slots available. To register a team to compete, call 228-467-7333 or 228-255-7333.

Come by boat come by car. You pay one price to get onto property and eat all the crawfish you can.

The event will be held on Saturday, May 14, from 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. The cost is $15-adults, $8-children and kids under 5 are free. Music will be provided by The Salt Bayou Band.

Jourdan River Steamer Restaurant is located on Hwy. 603 at the Jourdan River two miles north of MS 1-10 exit 13.

A portion of the proceeds will be donated to the Hope Haven Children's Shelter.

Pass resident charged in shooting of Picayune man

BY ELLIS C. CUEVAS

A Pass Christian man was arrested early Friday morning and charged with aggravated assault in an alleged shooting incident which occurred on Cathy Street, a few hours earlier in Bay St. Louis, Police Chief Frank McNeil reports.

"Corey Jansen Brown, 20, Kings Circle, Pass Christian, was arrested and charged with aggravated assault by shooting, and is lodged in the Hancock County Criminal Justice Facility," McNeil said in a news release.

Around 10:30 p.m. Thursday, Bay Police responded to a call from Poppy's Food Store, located at the intersection of Highway 90 and Washington Street, relative to a person who came inside the store who had been shot in his cheek, McNeil said.

When officers arrived on the scene they observed a white male (victim) sitting on a chair inside the store, he reported he had been shot. The clerk stated the subject entered the store and told her two black males had attempted to rob him and shot him and they were in a white car with two white females, according to McNeil.

McNeil continued, "A description of the subject's vehicle was issued and it was located in front of 130 Cathy Drive. A further investigation by Detectives and Officers revealed evidence that the shooting appeared to have occurred in the front yard of the residence. Witnesses were interviewed and statements which led to the arrest of Brown who surrendered himself to police at the police station about 3 a.m. May 6."

Brown turned himself at the police station before officers had checked a residence in Bay St. Louis where he was also known to have stayed, McNeil said.

The victim was transported to a Coast Hospital and is reported in a stable condition.

To date no weapon has been recovered and the case is still under investigation.

McNeil went on to say, "Inside the suspect's vehicle there was a small amount of drugs found that field tested positive for cocaine. The vehicle was impounded and is being held at this time pending further investigation by the Bay-Waveland Narcotics Task Force. Bay Chief of Detectives Tom Burleson is in charge of the investigation."

"Brown's bond was set at $20,000, but he is being held in jail, because he is was out on bond for another shooting incident which occurred in Hancock County. Brown's bond will be revoked and he will remain in jail until the completion of this investigation and the matter is referred to a grand jury," McNeil reported. A preliminary hearing on Brown's charges in the recent shooting is scheduled in Bay Municipal court on June 1.

The Integrated Powerhead Demonstrator engine is successfully fired April 28 at NASA's Stennis Space Center near Bay St. Louis, Miss. A plume of fire lights up the night during the evening test at the center's E-1 test stand. The initial full-duration ignition test lasted 4.9 seconds, and is part of a series of tests being conducted on the demonstrator. The purpose of the series is to demonstrate the feasibility and benefits of the full-flow, staged combustion rocket engine cycle, and to demonstrate advanced engine component technologies. The Integrated Powerhead Demonstrator project is managed by the U.S. Air Force Research Laboratory at Edwards Air Force Base in Calif., in cooperation with NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

Stennis tests new rocket engine

THE SEA COAST ECHO

An engine developed to demonstrate advanced rocket technologies for future launch vehicles was successfully ignited April 28 at 9:10 p.m. CDT during its test firing at NASA's Stennis Space Center near Bay St. Louis.

The initial tests on the engine, known as the Integrated Powerhead Demonstrator (IPD), were conducted at the Stennis Center's E-1 test stand. The purpose of the test series was to demonstrate the feasibility and benefits of the full-flow, staged combustion rocket engine cycle, and to demonstrate advanced engine component technologies.

The demonstrator engine test lasted 4.9 seconds. This was the third of 22 planned static ground tests of the engine.

The IPD project is the first of three phases of the Department of Defense's Integrated High Payoff Rocket Propulsion Technology Program, which is aimed at demonstrating technologies that double the capability of state-of-the-art cryogenic booster engines. The project's goal is to develop a full-flow, hydrogen-fueled, stage combustion rocket engine.

This phase one demonstrator engine employs dual preburners that provide oxygen-rich and hydrogen-rich staged combustion. The innovative system is expected to keep engine components cooler during flight. Lowering component temperatures could provide higher engine reliability and longer life, while still maintaining the highest system efficiency attainable.

While attaining the desired objectives for the Integrated High Payoff Rocket Propulsion Technology Program, the IPD engine tests also will demonstrate many component technologies directly applicable to the goals of NASA's Exploration Systems Mission Directorate. The component and system level technologies found in the Integrated Powerhead Demonstrator engine also could dramatically increase launch safety and system reliability, and reduce the cost of future space transportation systems.

NASA's Exploration

Systems Mission Directorate in Washington and the Department of Defense's Integrated High Payoff Rocket Propulsion Technology Program are jointly developing the Integrated Powerhead Demonstrator. The project is being managed by the U.S. Air Force Research Laboratory at Edwards Air Force Base in Calif., in cooperation with NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

The demonstrator engine is a research and development activity intended to deliver advanced propulsion technologies. The engine's unique component technologies have been produced by industry partners, Aerojet and Rocketdyne. The technologies developed will benefit many Department of Defense space-access programs, as well as NASA's goal to power future missions to the Moon and beyond -- cornerstones of the Vision for Space Exploration.

The Vision seeks to expand human and robotic exploration of the Solar System.

Sciatica Means Nerve Pressure; Chiropractic Care

Sciatica, often mistakenly referred to as a disease, is actually a symptom of nerve pressure or an irritation of the sciatic nerve which can be caused by a physical injury, malfunction or disease.

Since the sciatic nerve is the largest and longest nerve in the human body, it is not surprising that many authorities consider it the most susceptible to injury.

Whether caused by over-exertion, a fall down a stairway or a kick from a mule, the result is the same... pain. The pain may be minor in its first stages and cause only mild discomfort, or it may be crippling and intense to the point of making strong athletes weep.

The pain of sciatica may appear anywhere in the region of the sciatic nerve, from the low back down to the feet.

Applying heat or cold to the painful area in an attempt to relieve sciatic pain will not solve the problem, nor will it be truly successful in bringing temporary relief.

Sciatica is a problem for the Doctor of Chiropractic!

As a specialist in nerve and spinal disorders, he knows that nerve interference in the low back is the cause of trouble. His training and experience enable him to treat the cause, not just administer temporary measures aimed at alleviating the symptoms.

Through proper care and treatment, he works to relieve the pressure on the sciatic nerve and to eliminate the interference, thus enabling the sciatic nerve to resume proper functioning, eliminating the problem from within. The healing process takes place naturally, with nothing added to or removed from the body.

Cuevas' Quotes

by Ellis C. Cuevas
Publisher Emeritus

Safety First!

This is the season of the year when fishermen and boaters begin to think about getting out on the water.

One of the main things necessary when one is in a boat on the water is safety.

There are boat owners who really do not know all the safety standards that need to be followed.

One way to acquire these skills is by attending U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary boating safety courses.

It so happens that Coast Guard Flotilla 35 will be conducting a boating and seamanship course at the Coast Guard station in Gulfport this week.

The classes will meet on Tuesday, May 10, 7 to 9 p.m.; Thursday, May 12, 7 to 9 p.m.; and Saturday, May 14, from 8 a.m. to noon.

There is certain safety equipment, such as types of flotation devices needed, safety items for boats of various sizes, etc.

All of these and much more can be learned at by attending special boating courses.

As a person who has done a lot of fishing in years gone by, I can tell you this, it is all together a different world on the water as compared to being on land.

I have personally seen two fishermen early one morning have to abandon a moving craft at the mouth of the Jourdan river, as it went up in flames.

Fortunately the two on the boat had flotation devices on and were swiftly hauled in by a boat which was not far behind it on the river, before my fishing buddy and I could pull up anchor reach them from our fishing spot.

Our Coast Guard Auxiliary has been offering safe boating courses for many years, and no telling how lives they have saved by boaters learning the safety rules they teach.

Not only the boat captain should attend these courses, but the entire family too. For further information on this week's course, or future courses, contact J.J. Johnson, public affairs officer of Flotilla 35 at 228-216-2909.

If you noticed in Thursday's issue of The Echo, there was a large photo with the headline 'Starr shines over Vegas.'

It so happens the Starr-referred-to, is Starr Renee' (Chapman), of Waveland and her dancing partner Kelly.

The duo captured the Las Vegas, Showdown competition Global Title in all four dance divisions, American Rhythm, American Smooth, International Latin, and International Standard at the Las Vegas Hilton.

Congratulations to Starr and Kelly for their great sweeping victory after some three days of dancing competition in Vegas.

Hope for the best, plan for the worst

A key component of President Reagan's peace through strength doctrine was to hope for the best, but plan for the worst.

Even with active diplomacy, we should always hone our military's technical edge with robust acquisition programs for the latest ships, aircraft, weapons and training, making sure we can defeat any threat, foreseen or unforeseen. As evidenced in the War on Terror, we have a great military today, thanks in large part to the long-term investments we made during the Reagan years, but we're not investing or acquiring new equipment like we once did.

Even though we're currently fighting nation-less bands of terrorists, we must not forget that we still face conventional and nuclear military threats from established nations with armies, navies and air forces as capable as the old Soviet Union. Given the alarming military buildup in communist China, coupled with threats from Iran and communist North Korea, we're going to have these challenges for years to come. That's why I'm fighting Administration plans to close 25 percent of our military capacity - including busy training facilities - as well as plans to mothball perfectly good ships, and slow-roll our new shipbuilding programs.

Closing bases, cutting shipbuilding budgets and downscaling other resources are actions geared more toward short-term budgetary pressures and current security standards than on our anticipated long-term security requirements. That's not consistent with peace through strength - not Reaganesque at all when you consider that our Navy is headed toward having only about 100 ships, down from the 600-ship Navy supported by President Reagan.

Communist China, particularly its naval advances, should cause us all concern. For three years, the communist Chinese have been conducting a huge naval buildup that could enable them to challenge America's defensive posture in the Pacific and particularly our democratic friends in Taiwan. This was almost unthinkable 10 years ago, but today, China has advanced submarines, including nuclear ones.

Mother's Day blues

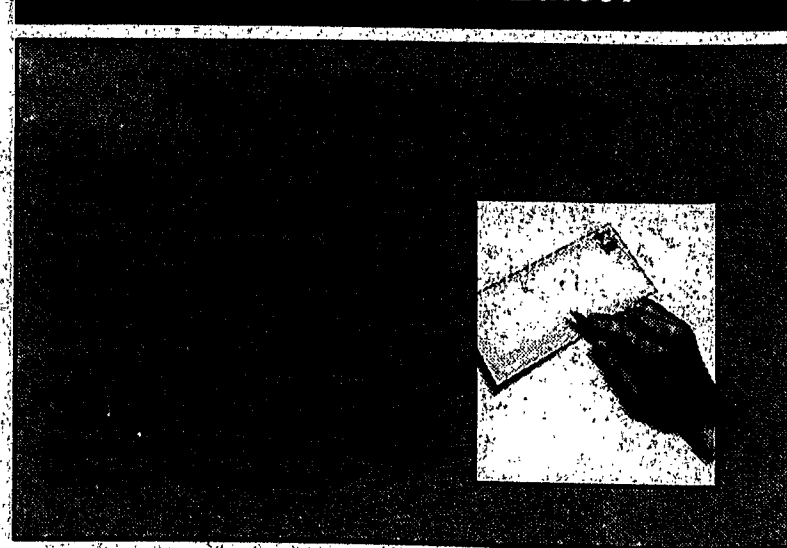

Mother's Day is one of those sweet, sad holidays on the calendar. For millions it is a day we remember our mothers with special gifts, dinners, visits, trips, and loving thoughts. We stop for a moment and consider how special and magical the whole concept of birth and life is, and what a unique position our own individual mothers play in the drama of continuance.

When I was old enough - seven or eight - to buy my mother a gift with my own money, I purchased the same things every year for her on that special day. I would take my savings out of my piggy bank (a real piggy with a rubber stopper on the underside of its tummy) and set off for the walk to town one and a half miles away. It was safe for a seven year old to do that in 1952. I would go to the Woolworth Department Store, the biggest store in our little town of five thousand souls. There I would go to the "ladies section" and navigate to the counter where the "scents" and "lotions" were arrayed in abundance. I selected the lilac body lotion and the lilac scented bath powder that my mother loved. I loved how she smelled when she used it. We had lilac bushes 20 feet tall in our back yard. Some days, when they were in bloom, I would stand with my head out the bathroom window and reel in the smell of the blooms which could be almost overpowering at times. When I smell lilac, I think of my mother and I think of mother's day.

I would then go down the street to the Ben Franklin five and dime store. There I would pick out a new oil cloth for our kitchen table. For those of you who don't know what an oil cloth is, it was a shiny coated cloth with different scenes printed on it. It was heavier than plastic but it had the same ability to repel liquids and you could wipe it clean with a cloth. It came on a long roll, like a carpet roll and the salesperson cut off the length you needed. I always chose one with a pretty outdoor scene on it, frequently a fall scene with gold and bronze colors but sometimes a spring garden motif with twenty shades of green punctuated by red and blue flowers. They were pretty, but what I liked best was hearing my mother tell people that I had bought the table covering for her for mother's day. Adults would marvel that such a young boy would buy such a gift for such an occasion and my mother would reply that I was "a good boy." Music to my ears.

I don't remember how or why these gifts became my mother's day tradition. I am sure someone, my older sister probably, got me started on that track, but those gifts were my offerings of love to my mother until I was well into my teens. By the time I was 14 or so, I had changed and so had my gifts. But I do not remember any other gift I ever gave my mother the entire remainder of her life; I can only remember the lilac and the oil cloth. Perhaps because they were given with the innocence of unqualified love.

My mother is gone now. I missed far too many mother's days, spent far too little time with her as my family grew bigger and she grew smaller. My wife doesn't particularly care for the scent of lilac, which is ok, she's my wife, not my mother and she deserves her own scent to be remembered by. I don't know if they even make oil cloth anymore. If they did, I would like to go to the store and buy three yards of their best and prettiest so I could sit at my own table and remember those days that have gone from my life so quickly.

And so, on mother's day I, like many others whose mother's are not here, feel a little sad, a little blue. But I have good memories and they outweigh the sadness.

Oysters -- DMR & DEQ

The two governmental agencies were collecting the shellfish for a preliminary study to look for heavy metals, specifically nickel and chromium in the organisms. A study recently published by several top shellfish scientists in the Journal of Shellfish Research found high levels of the heavy metals and elevated levels of dioxins in oysters and rangia clams in area waters, making them unsafe for consumption, the study says. The samples taken Thursday will likely not be tested for dioxins said the head of DEQ's office of pollution control Phil Bass on Wednesday.

"Dioxin levels don't pose a hazard in my opinion," said Bass. "This will just be a quick snapshot. We will be back in two to three weeks with a more thorough list of sites to be tested. We plan to test the entire Mississippi Gulf Coast area."

Chief Executive Officer for MERA Deborah Dauner said her group had concerns about the collection and sampling techniques that would be used by the two agencies. The group mostly kept their distance and watched the process with binoculars. Dauner said she would like to see governmental agencies be more open with the general public. She asked that groups such as hers be invited to observe the scientific process.

The first and most successful collection site, the Pass Christian Reef in Area II-C, will be used as control for the rest of the sampling said Biological Shellfish Coordinator for DMR Scott Gordon.

"We figure that this site is far enough away so that it is fairly free of contaminants," said Gordon.

The team washed each of the 96 oysters collected with de-ionized water, packing them first in foil, then in plastic ziplocks and storing them on ice. DEQ fishery biologist Al Gibson said he hoped to collect as many at each site, but repeated dredges at some sites yielded few results.

At the second site Area II Prohibited, near the grassy point by the DuPont DeLisle plant dredges yielded only one live oyster and a few clams.

At the third location Area II Restricted in the Northeast side of the Bay, repeated dredging yielded four clams, a bag of muscles, and several oyster clusters that biologists said would be separated at the lab. At the final test site, Area II-D Conditionally Approved between the Bay bridge and the train bridge, the team had more luck and were able to collect close to two dozen oysters.

Gibson was scheduled to drive the samples to the DEQ lab in Pearl as soon as the boat docked. The samples will be tested at the lab under the direction of Henry Folmer, said Gibson. Part of the samples were scheduled to be tested in a contracted lab, but Gibson said he did not know which one. Field biologist Barbara Viskup said the it was important to keep the samples alive until testing could begin. Results are expected near the end of the month.

The Journal study will be used as a part of evidence that attorney Kathleen Smiley and her team of legal counsel say they have gathered in an attempt to link the DuPont DeLisle titanium dioxide plant with an array of illness in the community. More than 2,000 local residents have joined in the suit alleging that the plant is responsible for cancers, neurological problems and more in themselves and family members.

DuPont officials have questioned the validity of the study because it was funded by attorneys involved in the lawsuit against the plant. They have also contended that their operations are in no way responsible for illness in the surrounding area.

I thank God and I thank You for your support in electing me your City Councilman Ward 3.

Looking forward to working with you.

NEWSPAPERS DELIVER VOTERS

70% of newspaper subscribers say they will "definitely vote"!

NEWSPAPERS ARE EFFECTIVE
Newspaper readership is highest among the groups most likely to vote... professionals, high income earners, the more educated and ages 35-64. Less than one of every three television viewers say they will "probably vote".

NEWSPAPERS HAVE CREDIBILITY
Newspapers score higher than any other medium in believability surveys.

NEWSPAPERS EDUCATE VOTERS
Newspapers offer in-depth coverage of local events and current issues, but just snippets and sound bites. By using this strength, Political Campaigns can get their message out to readers who tend to be "Centers of Influence" in their communities. This ability to tell the whole story helps voters make informed decisions. If you are running for political office, you need to be "in the paper"!

Lott -- hopes & plans

China launched 13 attack submarines between 2002 and 2004 and also built 23 ships that can transport troops and equipment. One intelligence official recently noted that "China's amphibious assault ship building alone equals the entire U.S. Navy shipbuilding since 2002. It definitely represents a significant increase in overall capacity."

The U.S. in contrast is retiring ships barely 20-years-old, like the ground-breaking AEGIS destroyer USS Ticonderoga, and our Pentagon is considering proposals that could leave only one American shipbuilder to craft our new surface warships. That's a bad idea. Giving a single shipyard every Navy contract, even if it were Mississippi's own Northrop Grumman Ingalls shipyard, would not be good for the country. Only a handful of American shipyards remain in business. If we lose another shipyard and the thousands of skilled shipbuilders that go with it, we soon may have to rely on foreign workers to build our own Navy. That is unthinkable but not impossible, given this trend.

Now, I certainly don't equate all Chinese, North Koreans or Iranians with terrorists. But we must remember that these nations are still dictatorships, with a long history of suppressing freedom and being callous toward human rights and religious freedom. To the billions of good, freedom-aspiring peoples living under those oppressive governments, we should be sending messages of support and evidence that America has a long-standing commitment to strength, just like President Reagan did for those once trapped inside cruel, communist systems.

Pursuing peace through strength, constantly recruiting good people, aggressively building new ships and new planes, and providing the best training - that was President Reagan's vision. Those plans he made for the worst, actually worked for the best. Would President Reagan respond to new threats by closing bases and shredding America's naval budget? No way. Even if they don't have a military base or a ship within miles, all Americans should be very concerned about base closures, shipbuilding budgets and America's long-term military might. Freedom's fate, at any given moment, could depend on the state of our military.

What gives me a hollow feeling in my chest is thinking about all of the children who do not have such good memories or who will be separated from their mothers on May 8. I wonder what it must be like to have had feelings about your mother, or wonder who or where your mother is, or wonder if your mother cares about you or worse, knowing that she didn't care.

Here are some poems written by children who stayed at the "Hill Country Youth Ranch," a shelter for abused and neglected children in Texas. The collection of poems is entitled "Butterfly Mother" and they are used with the permission of the authors and publisher. One poem comes from Hope Haven.

Butterfly Mother by Anita, age 14

I still remember her. Her name was Nancy. She liked to listen to music. She loved horses and swimming.

I still remember her. Her name was Nancy. She was very very beautiful and she liked to buy me things.

I still remember her.

Though I move from place to place, she stays with me... in my heart.

I still remember her smile. She is like a nice beautiful Mother... but she flew away.

Toys by Daisy, age 13
My mom is just a child
Trapped in a child's mind.

And my sister and me...
We're the broken toys

How can you... From a Hope Haven Staff Member
How can you?
No truths... just lies
How can you?
Pain in their eyes
How can you?
Though their bodies will mend

How can you?
Forget about them?

Please include all of the children who are in care and in custody, in shelters and foster homes, in pain and in need in your prayers this Mother's Day and pray for their mothers as well.

Sewer -- Pearlington

Board of Supervisors who was recording the meeting—there was no quorum, making it an unofficial question-and-answer session.

Cuevas immediately drew the ire of the half-dozen or so members of the Pearlington citizens committee present Thursday when he opened the meeting by questioning Tony Dixon, the group's representative, and asked whether the group was paying Dixon for his services.

Dixon, who is disabled, has said the group reimburses him for expenses such as gasoline or copies of documents concerning the sewer project, but does not pay him a salary.

Cuevas also asked group member Ben Taylor, who operates a locomotive repair service, whether he had overcharged or ever been accused of overcharging the county for rail car service when he was under contract at Port Bienville. Taylor said no such accusation had ever been made, nor was it warranted.

"Since we're being personal, Ronnie..." Dixon said, "did you ever burn your own store down?"

Cuevas responded: "Are you out of your mind?"

Dixon was referring to the arson that destroyed Cuevas Grocery last year. Several people were charged with the crime, one of whom was acquitted last month in federal court. The other suspects have yet to go to trial.

Dixon said Cuevas' questioning of group members, and the fact that Deen was recording the meeting, "sounds like intimidation."

"The only ones being intimidated, Tony," Cuevas said, "is us."

"The problem is," Dixon said, "you've always ruled Pearlington with threats and intimidation. ... Have you ever heard the name 'King Ronnie'?"

Since last October, the monthly sewer board meetings have grown increasingly contentious. Several Pearlington residents grouped together as a citizens committee to question the sewer board's actions.

Among their many concerns, committee members say, is the fact that quite literally, something stinks in Pearlington: Whenever there's a heavy rain, the neighborhood cess pools spill out into the drainage ditches lining the streets. Although grant and public funds were initially earmarked for a water and sewer project and the board was formed in 1998, as of May 2005, the first pipe has yet to be laid; and now, the project only includes sewage collection, not fresh water, yet the projected costs have increased dramatically.

The committee also questions why the board has made many of the decisions it has, such as bringing in Compton Engineering to design the project when they feel an outside company with many more sewer projects under its belt had initially been selected; and why there are apparently no minutes or records of any board meetings at all from November 2000 until October of last year.

Dixon has also alleged that Cuevas steered the board toward beginning the project in a sparsely-populated area of Pearlington rather than in the portion of the town where more people will initially be served because Cuevas owns property in that area that he wants to develop privately.

Dixon also has publicly alleged that Cuevas burnt down his own store and framed others for the crime; and that Sea Coast Echo employees took money from Cuevas "to not write the truth."

Dixon has also said he has received death threats from county employees and been told that he would wind up "floating face down in the bayou."

Cuevas has dismissed Dixon's allegations as preposterous.

Citizens group members say they keep asking questions but keep getting either no answers, conflicting answers or misleading answers.

Water and Sewer board members say they have answered every question as completely and truthfully as they can and have given every scrap of information they have to either the group as a whole or directly to Dixon. Many questions, they say, can't actually be answered completely until the project actually gets off the drawing board and into the ground.

After Dixon asked Cuevas whether he had burnt down his own store, one of the group members said, "Hang on, I'm asking some serious questions, and I don't want (Cuevas) to run off."

Among those questions: "How much money has been spent" on the project so far.

Cuevas said that he did not have the exact figures in front of him, but estimated somewhere between $450,000-$500,000.

"We've given (Tony) a copy of every check that was written," Cuevas said.

On the topic of easements—the procurement of which has been cited as one of the factors in the project's delay—Cuevas said "It all depends where the property is located (in relation to the sewer line), but at any location, we have to have an easement. ... If the collection system is in the right of way, the only easement would be to the hook-up in the house."

"How much will it cost the people (per month)?" "We've always estimated about $35," Cuevas said, explaining that the $35 is the top-end fee that the board set, depending on final costs of the project and a contract being established with Southern Regional. "35 was our goal that it would not exceed."

Cuevas said.

One of the group's fears is that with the way the project plans have changed and the different direction Southern Regional has taken the treatment system, the people of Pearlington will end up having to dig much deeper into their pockets to pay back the loans than they were originally promised.

Cuevas said Thursday that with the amount of grant money the district has received, that shouldn't happen.

HANCOCK MEDICAL CENTER

Hancock Medical Center was recently awarded freaccreditation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation for Healthcare Organizations for three years following a detailed, on-site four-day survey by a physician/nurse team.

Numerous employees were interviewed and observed in hospital and clinic settings, while surveyors tested compliance with nationally recognized standards throughout the organization.

In closing comments, surveyors lauded the dedication, enthusiasm and synergy demonstrated by our health care team at HMC.

During National Hospital Week, we pause to commend the 543 employees who are the heart of our organization and, with our medical staff, are the reason for our success as your community hospital.

NRL conducts ocean research off Mississippi's Gulf Coast

To understand the mechanisms that transfer properties such as heat, salt, energy, marine organisms, and materials across the shelf slope, the Naval Research Laboratory has undertaken intensive measurements and modeling programs in the shelf and slope waters off Mississippi.

The continental shelf waters here are a nearly perfect region to study coastal ocean processes as it gently slopes down to depths of about 300 ft. off the Gulf Coast.

Near this depth, the continental shelf ends as depths rapidly increase to greater than a mile.

According to Bill Teague, Oceanographer in NRL's Ocean Sciences Branch, cross-shelf exchanges of continental-shelf waters with deep-ocean waters (and vice versa) are common and have a large impact on the environment in which we live. Ocean physics, optics, biology, and chemistry can be used to gain understanding of these exchanges, which presently are not sufficiently understood.

The entire region is being intensely simulated at high resolutions by numerical models here at NRL as part of the Slope to Shelf Energetics and Exchange Dynamics project. Numerical models provide a means of picturing and predicting what is happening in the ocean by realistically simulating ocean currents and water properties. High spatial resolutions are required to visualize and to understand processes such as ocean eddies (self contained circulations) that may only be a few thousand feet in diameter.

"This measurements program is one of the most intensive multi-discipline programs ever undertaken to achieve these goals," said chief Teague, "and lessons learned regarding the cross-shelf exchanges, such as when, where, and why they occur, will be widely applicable in the Gulf of Mexico and in other coastal regions around the globe."

Understanding of ocean processes in the Gulf of Mexico will also, in general, enable the Navy to better understand ocean conditions in areas that are poorly measured or not directly observable due to political boundaries and conflicts, such as, for example, the coastal seas off China.

The Gulf of Mexico is effectively being used as a "natural laboratory" to observe, model, and to understand complex processes in the ocean. Ultimately this work is intended to provide the science required to expand future Naval capabilities for ocean monitoring and predictions systems.

In-water field measurements taken early last summer were focused at the shelf break region about 100 miles south of Gulfport.

Miss. Concurrently, surface salinities were measured from an aircraft flying out of Stennis International Airport and sea surface temperature, height, and optical/biological parameters were measured from satellites.

A contract research vessel was chartered to conduct this elaborate field experiment. The first of three cruises was undertaken from Gulfport in September, and Dr. Teague considers the mooring deployments and related measurements made during the cruise a complete success.

State-of-the-art current profilers were deployed on the continental shelf and down the shelf slope at depths ranging from several hundred feet to greater than 1500 ft. These profilers will measure currents from the surface to the bottom for a year.

During the first cruise, water properties such as temperature and salinity, and numerous biological and optical properties were measured. "Joint data analyses will help us better understand the processes occurring just off our coast that affect us all," remarked Teague.

The multi-disciplinary team consisted of scientists and researchers from NRL, the University of Southern Mississippi, San Diego State University, U.S. Geological Survey (Gainesville, Fla.), and the U.S. Naval Reserve (Houston).

The second part of the field program was conducted in December of this year when the current moorings were recovered for servicing and to retrieve the current data.

The moorings were redeployed for another six months and will be recovered in May, providing a full year of current data.

Santa Cruz Insurance receives top ethics award

The Better Business Bureau of Mississippi honored Santa Cruz Insurance Group of Bay St. Louis and several other businesses from around the state, during their annual Mississippi Business Integrity Awards Ceremonies for 2005.

"With all the bad publicity that the business community has been receiving the past few years, you might be tempted to think that the ethics of Corporate America have taken a nose dive," said Bill Moak, President of the MS Better Business Bureau.

"But we believe that the vast majority of companies out there are trying every day to do the right thing and are acting in accordance with high ethical principles. Here in Mississippi, we have many examples of companies that try each day to apply sound ethics to their business practices."

Companies throughout the state were nominated and Santa Cruz Insurance Group was one of the 16 companies to receive this statewide honor.

"We were thrilled to be recognized for the professional and ethical business practices we have used over the past decade when dealing with our clients and employees. There is no greater honor or award we could receive!" said Charlotte Santa Cruz, Owner of Santa Cruz Insurance Group.

Charlotte Santa Cruz, owner of Santa Cruz Insurance Group, has also received recognition for her leadership throughout MS. She was named one of the Top 40 Business Leaders in MS for 2004 as well as one of the Top 10 Business Leaders for South MS in 2003.

Condos -- four in the works

Ann Street. Each of the buildings will be 34 stories high with 10 two- and three-bedroom units on each floor, said Kirk Ladner. The first two floors will be used for parking with additional parking garages adjacent to each building.

Kirk said plans call for elaborate landscaping details which will incorporate nature trails, swimming pools, and restroom facilities for condo residents. A "lazy river" feature will carry floaters from the tower complex around a marina and back again, he said.

L & M Land L.L.C., a partnership between Kirk and Keith Ladner and Stewart Juneau will bring two high rise towers to South Beach Blvd. just west of Lakeshore. Towers will be 28 and 29 stories high and hold 281, one, two and three bedroom condo units. The grounds will be elaborately landscaped with a pool between the towers, Keith Ladner said. Both projects will feature balcony views and be built to reflect the style of the area, Kirk said.

Both men said they feel that the projects will bring added prosperity to the area, rather than the ruin predicted by some. "Everything the community needs they will need more of, so this will bring more work for everyone," said

Keith. Kirk said he expected about 80 percent of the prospective owners to live in the units part time, leasing the units to other vacationers when they are not in town. We think this will bring a constant stream of new customers to area businesses, he said.

Keith said that the developers of the resort units will bear the expense to put in piping for water and sewer services and run the lines to lift stations, which they will also pay to upgrade. Developers are working with state and local officials to secure gaming funds for the upgrade of Lakeshore Rd., he said. Keith said that he and his partners will not support plans to close any portion of Beach Blvd. for other resort developments.

Presale of the Ann St. units will begin in two to three weeks, Kirk said. One of the towers on Beach Blvd. is already reserved, Keith said. Other units will range in price from the mid $300,000, he said. The Ann St. units will take about six years to complete, with those at Beach Blvd. taking about three years. Of course, whether the project goes forward will depend on presale figures. Presale should begin in two to three weeks, Kirk said.

Cure Land Development L. L. C. is planning four towers on property now holding the Bayou Caddy Fisheries. The buildings will all come down, said representative Richard Kern. The four towers will be 12, 20, 26 and 36 stories and hold 721 units when completed. The 12 story tower will go up first.

The building will feature wrap around balconies and be built to Miami Dade building standards, said Kern. The complex will feature retail stores, a spa, restaurants and a promenade open to the public. The grounds will be feature water scapes and have a tropical look, he said. Perez Designs of New York are designers for the complex.

A group of concerned area residents from the Coastal Community Watch group attended the meeting Thursday afternoon. Spokesperson, Ellie Anderson, said that hundreds of area residents had signed up with the group, with a common goal in mind, to preserve the quiet seaside atmosphere that already draws many tourists to the area. Anderson said there is a plan to appeal the decision of the Board of Supervisors to approve the C-4 district. If an appeal is filed the case will go to court. Development will be put on hold until a court decision is rendered.

Pass halts bid to stop sales of alcohol near churches

BY JOHN WATERMAN
Staff Writer

A moratorium prohibiting the sale of alcohol within 500 feet of any church or school was voted down Wednesday night by the Pass Christian Board of Aldermen.

While state law dictates a minimum distance of 100 feet, it is up to municipal governments to decide if further distance is required.

Alderman Donald Moore said the issue was brought before the planning commission when some residents were upset at local businessman Emile Garlepied's plans to open a daiquiri shop in the back of his tanning salon on St. Louis st.

Garlepied's salon, A Perfect Tan and Body, is located about a block from Trinity Episcopal Church and Pass High.

Moore said the board did voted against the moratorium for several reasons.

"(Garlepie) has already applied for a privilege license. Besides that, the notice the planning commission they had for the public meeting was defective because it did not name the time or the place the meeting was being held."

In addition, the proposal did not specify what kinds of businesses would be prohibited, or if businesses that already operated within 500 feet of a school or church would be allowed to continue operation.

"They're going to have to adopt a reasonable ordinance that accomplishes its goal without interfering with every business in town that sells alcohol," Moore said.

This group of white pelicans flies in formation over the Mississippi Sound near Clermont Harbor recently. The birds are often too high to fly in that area due to the rough waves. Photos courtesy of Mickey Ladner

A Grand Feast of White Pelicans

Views from a Front Porch

by Paul Estroza LaViolette

Paul, stop! Back up! I stopped the pickup and backed to the small bridge draining the first of the two marsh lakes just north of the road.

"Look over there," she pointed to an area at the far end of the lake.

We were out driving along Railroad Road north of Clermont Harbor. It was a Sunday kind of thing. We were looking in the several large marsh areas around Clermont Harbor in hopes of seeing some tricolor herons or maybe, with luck, a small blue. What she was pointing to was something completely unexpected.

White Pelicans!

About twenty or thirty of these extremely large birds were moving about behind a headland of marsh grass. They were feeding in a rather loose fashion, probably on fingerlings exiting from some small stream into the lake beyond the headland.

They made a grand sight and, as usual, I didn't have my camera.

I don't suppose there is any secret to my love of white pelicans. I have written before about how their brief visits are entwined in Stella and my lives. Unlike the brown pelicans, the white pelicans find the waters of the Sound too

This bird somehow manages to look both awkward and majestic as it makes a water landing in the Mississippi Sound.

rough to do their paddle, and I seldom see them in front of our house. But the about fishing and so Stella times we have seen them near the house and in other places in the area have been memorable.

Usually our sightings have been of groups of whites that range in numbers from a dozen or so birds to hundreds. As I said they are big. They have extraordinary wingspans of nine feet! The brown pelican is no slouch as to wingspan, but its six or so feet spread is a third less than its cousin. I'm always impressed when I see them. The sighting of several hundred of these huge birds swimming in groups, taking off and landing and soaring high above in the sky is a startling spectacle. A great spread of wings, a feast for the eye of immense beauty. Their presence in large groups is necessary for a practical reason: Whites don't dive on their prey like the brown pelicans that we find so prevalent in the open waters of the Mississippi Sound, but rather they form a curved line in the water to flush their prey ahead of them and then, closing the circle, they dip their enormous beaks down and scoop up their meal. Hence their desire for calm water and the reason they are found in our back bayous and bays such as the marsh lake we were looking at the other Sunday.

I talked about all this recently to an amateur photographer friend, Mickey Ladner, remarking that when I do see a group of white pelicans, I invariably don't have a camera and over a period of years have missed a great many superb photographs. Mickey is a native of Bay St. Louis. He went to school in the Bay and lived on Union Street. He lives in Long Beach now, but still considers himself a Bay person.

After listening to my sorry tale, he laughed and said, "I have some great pictures of white pelicans. I've made a hobby of taking them and have a large collection, let me send you a few."

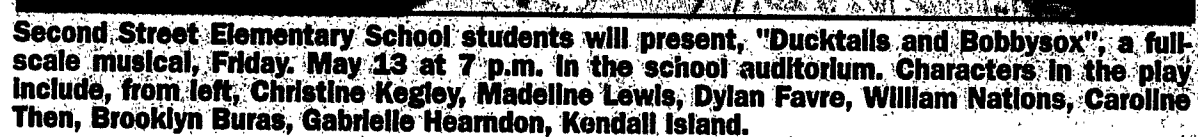

And so, I recently received in the mail a CD from Mickey with the beautiful pictures that are shown on this page. He wrote saying that these were taken outside of Batesville, MS at the Sardis Dam spillway. His pictures are here for you to enjoy. They are, I will admit, far superior to any pictures of these beautiful birds than I would have taken. If you like them, you can thank Mickey for their splendid quality.

Look at them carefully. I've been told that a number of large condominiums are to be built in the immediate area of the lakes and that by mitigating wetland rights, a great deal of the regional marsh is to be molded into a golf course. It may well be that the next time you want to see a tri-color heron, or a small blue heron or perhaps some of those magnificent white pelicans, you'll have to go to the condominium's air-cooled, exclusive club house.

Don't worry. The club will have pictures of them. They'll be in large, expensive frames over the leather chairs near the bar.

White pelicans are technically walking on water when they land or take off.

U.S. Rep. Gene Taylor announced the results of the 2005 Congressional Art Contest which was concluded Friday, April 29 at the Mississippi Gulf Coast Community College (MGCCC) Jackson County Campus in Gautier. Recognition was given to first through fourth place in each division, with honorable mentions being awarded as well. The overall winner's work is named Best in Show and receives the honor of representing the Fourth Congressional District in the Cannon Tunnel. Taylor stated, "Congratulations to Joshua Fowles and all the young artists who put their time and energy into this competition. All the artwork is impressive and proof that these students have talent beyond their years. Many thanks to Mississippi Gulf Coast Community College in Jackson County for hosting the event. Also, thank you to all the art teachers across the District who motivated their students to participate in the competition."

The event was coordinated by Leon Grey, Chairman of the Fine Arts Department at MGCCC Jackson County, and Mrs. Jerry Martin of Congressman Gene Taylor's Hattiesburg Office. The artwork was judged by Kevin Turner, art instructor at the Jackson County campus.

Math Winner

The Pearl River Community College Department of Science, Mathematics, and Business recently hosted the district-wide Mississippi Council of Teachers of Mathematics (MCTM) Junior High Mathematics Contest. Science Smarts @ Your Library

Come touch a live reptile at library program.

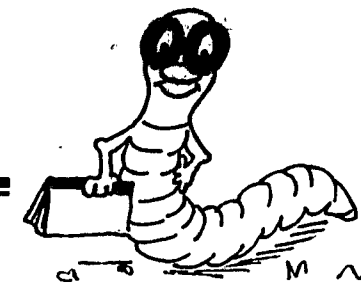

Do your children get excited about snakes and other reptiles? Have they ever wanted to touch a live snake or other reptile? Have they ever seen a baby alligator?

As part of its Science Smarts @ Your Library project, the Hancock County Library System is hosting an interactive program by the J-L Scott Marine Education Center. The program, called Slimy, Slithering Snakes and Other Reptiles, is Saturday, May 14 at 2:30 p.m. at the Bay St. Louis-Hancock County Library. Programs are geared for middle to high school students and their parents.

Topics for the program include reptiles of the Gulf Coast, how they live and what they mean to our environment. Participants will have the opportunity to see a live reptile.

The J-L Scott Marine Education Center and Aquarium is the Biloxi campus of the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory (GCRL), both of which are part of The University of Southern Mississippi's College of Science and Technology, Department of Ocean and Earth Science.

Science Smarts @ Your Library combines programs and resources to motivate students to pursue careers in science, technology, engineering and mathematics. It is partially funded by a Federal Library Services and Technology Act grant administered by the Mississippi Library Commission and awarded to the Hancock County Library System.

Pizza and Coke will be provided. For more information on this program, call 467-5282.

Are You A Satisfied Customer?

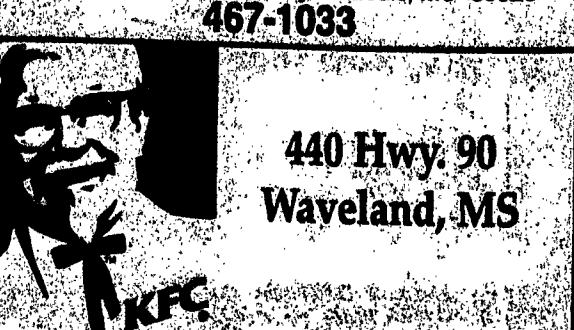

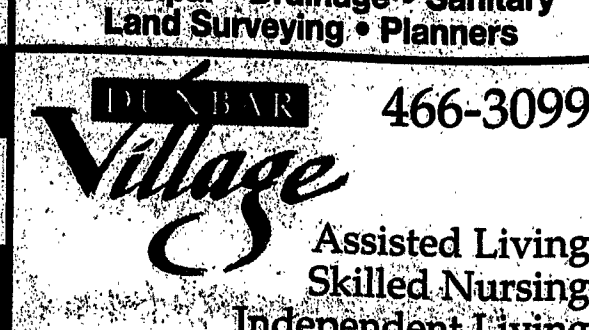

One of the prime requirements for any successful business are satisfied customers. Those in the business world are keenly aware that a satisfied customer will most likely return to them in the future, and that they will recommend their products and services to others. To be a satisfied customer, we need to be treated fairly and honestly, and in a civilized manner, we do not like being taken advantage of, cheated or ridiculed in any way. Likewise, on a personal level, we should also strive to have satisfied customers. Everyone we come in contact with is somewhat of a customer, and we should be selling our friendship, goodwill and cheerfulness. The Bible tells us to treat others as we want them to treat us, and when dealing with others this "Golden Rule" is necessary for us to have and keep enjoyable relationships. Dissension in one's family, or in the workplace, or with anyone we deal with, is contrary to the way our Lord wants us to live our lives. And although it is not always easy to reflect God's goodwill to others, when we are cordial to others, we receive enjoyment and we are blessed by extending God's love.

Therefore, whatever you want men to do to you, do also to them; for this is the Law and the Prophets.

No. 1 cause of death among children

Nineteen-year-old Jason Mitchum charged with negligent homicide, was cleaning his shotgun when it discharged, killing seventeen-year-old John Dixon, Jr.

This and similar headlines recur with unnerving frequency across the United States.

The prime cause of death among children 14 years old and under has been bandied about for many decades, but always in a rather vague way. Sure, there seemed to be some perception that accidents had a major role in the deaths of most younger children.

Now, however, it is being spelled out for us that the main cause of death among children is found in the most forbidding place possible: one's home. Specifically, preventable injuries of every sort in the home are the culprit, the slayer of children.

In supreme irony, we generally tend to look outside the home for deadly agents which threaten the well-being or very life of our children. As our children step outside the haven of home, they are admonished to stop, look and listen before crossing a street.

"Birds of a feather flock together," they are further warned. That, naturally, refers to bad children, as we call them. Sometimes we meet great resistance when we advise our children not to associate with bad children; lest they become like them, and, worse, lest they incur the mortal dangers which are part and parcel of the daily life of bad children.

Old refrigerators pose a dis-ting threat to small children, especially boys, for boys are notorious for being adventurous, daring and inquisitive. It is inviting to climb into the old boxes, but, once shut inside, there is no way to open the door from within the death trap.

Even a bucket of water can be extremely dangerous to toddlers who are clumsy and ungainly by reason of their disproportionate head which places their center of balance high up near the head. They can easily incline and dip into a bucket of water without trying, but may find it impossible to wiggle back out. That is enough to drown them.

Another terrible hazard for small children is the common toilet stool. If there is a means of access, the same physics come into play as in the bucket of water. Top-heavy toddlers can easily topple head-first into the stool, but cannot muscle their way out.

A kindred threat are bath tubs where the first hazard can be the slippery sides of the tub. Even adults in their prime can and sometimes do get injured from slipping and banging their bodies, especially their heads. All the more can small children sustain injuries. Anti-skid rubber mats or strips should be applied to the bottom of tubs.

Parents are warned not to keep common cleansers such as ammonia, bleach and Drano in an unlocked cabinet under the kitchen sink or elsewhere. Strangely, it is not clear whether some children even ingest such powerful cleansers intentionally. In other words, having such things on hand is a threat in itself, yet at times an invitation to the suicidal.

Sadly, suicidal tendencies among children, even some small ones, is an ever-present threat which parents should keep warily before them. Health scientists have discovered that some supposedly accidental ingestions of poisons by children were intentional.

Medicines of any kind should likewise be kept out of the reach of small children and perhaps even locked up for what is mildly toxic to an adult may easily be lethal to a child. Naturally, children find brightly colored pills very attractive and interesting.

Ditto for firearms, which should always be locked securely and should be unloaded when not in use by their adult owner. One of my uncles had a 12-gauge double-barreled shotgun whose great weight and obvious power always intrigued me as a small child.

Fortunately, there were never any shells around to tempt me to load and shoot it.

Even the family swimming pool is a potential venue for disaster when small children are around. How often do we hear or read news about a child who somehow made it around or under a restraining fence, fell into and drowned in a pool?

Unfortunately, it takes only a few inches of water to drown a small child. So, how can we warn our children against the dangers of water? Probably the best way to educate a child about water is to teach the child to swim.

And, since all of us swam in our mother's womb before coming forth into the world, it is best to teach small babies to swim.

Yes, fetuses spend most of their time in the womb swimming around with ease. This firsthand early acquaintance with water makes it a simple thing to introduce even an infant to just six months of water deep enough to swim in.

Babies less than one year old take to the water more readily than older babies. Often, they willingly go under water during the first lesson. While there is no rule of thumb, babies six months old are the easiest to teach to swim and to understand the water. This ability removes a huge threat to their well-being, because children love to be in water.

Away from home, there is the danger of careless adults who refuse to or forget to wear life jackets over perilous bodies of water. Not even the best swimmers should be in a boat without a life jacket, since anyone can be knocked unconscious at any given time.

Finally, there is the repulsive practice some adults have of drinking alcohol while driving a boat. Little do most realize that drinking and driving in a boat differs from drinking and driving in a car only by surface but not at all in the fatal threat of danger.

In the entire matter of seat harnesses, boat harnesses or life jackets, small children are completely at the mercy of lazy, careless, feckless adults who apparently are even less concerned about small children than they are about themselves.

An incorrectly installed car seat harness for a child passenger or, worse, no seat harness at all, are sure ways of getting a child maimed for life or killed if the vehicle is involved in a bad accident. Even a car moving just ten miles an hour can deliver a life-threatening jolt to a child if it hits something solid or is hit by another vehicle.

For all the deadly threats to our children posed by sundry drugs and the lethal culture of violence which invariably accompanies drugs, we on the home front must take care of the business of education, faith, morality and discipline at home.

Reflections on Life

by Father Jerome LeDoux, SVD

Now, however, it is being spelled out for us that the main cause of death among children is found in the most forbidding place possible: one's home. Specifically, preventable injuries of every sort in the home are the culprit, the slayer of children.

In supreme irony, we generally tend to look outside the home for deadly agents which threaten the well-being or very life of our children. As our children step outside the haven of home, they are admonished to stop, look and listen before crossing a street.

"Birds of a feather flock together," they are further warned. That, naturally, refers to bad children, as we call them. Sometimes we meet great resistance when we advise our children not to associate with bad children; lest they become like them, and, worse, lest they incur the mortal dangers which are part and parcel of the daily life of bad children.

The "Word" for the Week

In the name of!

What's in a name? A lot! A person's name to him or her is the utmost recognition of who they are. When spoken immediately the character of that person begins to formulate. It means something.

In the old testament, the Hebrew scribes that copied the ancient manuscripts were fearful to even write the name of Jehovah or Yahweh, the ancient name of God. That's the respect and admiration the ancients had in Bible days.

Not so today. His name to many is just a slang.

God Damn, Jesus Christ. Those names are thrown out in anger or laughter, even as a curse.

The people that commonly use those names usually are not trying to disrespect the Lord. It's just a bad habit.

Nevertheless, the Almighty is slow to anger, but He will repay.

"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord your God in vain. For the Lord will not hold him guiltless who takes His name in vain" (Ex 20: 1, 7).

This writer has a strong suspicion that the constant misuse of God's name makes one wonder how spiritually shallow that person is. One must remember that the name of God Almighty must be cherished and honored at all times.

For that name is above every name in Heaven, on earth, or under the earth. In that name eternal life dwells.

Who so ever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.

Honor the Kings name. He will honor you someday; misuse it, and He will misuse you.

At Peace with God?

You're not at odds with God, are you? If you are at home with the ways of the world, you should reconsider. For example, when a public official lies about how much he paid his mistress, the lie is reprehensible.

We ignore the philandering and adultery. We snuggle up with the world when we do so. The Bible says, "Whoever wishes to be a friend of the world, makes himself an enemy of God" (James 4: 4).

When you indulge in sins acceptable to the world or approve of those sins, you oppose God. You shun what is right. It might be fun for a time. However, the veneer of joy soon wears off. Reality sets in with a vengeance. Your heart is heavy. You feel dirty on the inside. Life seems like a dead end. You need a real answer to the inner burden of guilt upon your heart. You need Jesus Christ. "How much more will the blood of Christ, cleanse your conscience from dead works to serve the living God" (Hebrews 9:14). Inner cleansing is possible through faith in Jesus Christ. Ask God for it. Ask God to cleanse your conscience from the inner burden of guilt. God will put you on a new path. You will have peace with God. "By faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ" (Romans 5:1).

Hancock County 4-H Year End Celebration

The 2004 Hancock 4-H Awards Banquet was held November 5, 2004, at the Hancock Civic Center in Bay St. Louis. The theme this year was Thanksgiving and the decorations reflected that theme. The main dish this year was turkey, smoked deep-fried, and oven baked. 4-H families brought the vegetables and desserts. Needless to say the food was great. Approximately 78 people attended.

Brooke Ladner of Horns and Hooves opened the program with a welcome to everyone. Invited guests were introduced which included Hancock County 4-H Advisory Council members, Ms. Laury Peterson and Juliana Stolz. The Pledge of Allegiance was read by the Cloverbuds, Ryder Ladner, Jabe Hinton, Steven Ingersoll, Hunter Ladner, and Austin Johnson, and the 4-H Pledge was read by the club officers, Meagan Necaise, Daniel Luxich, Sarah Johnson, Peyton Lee, Brooke Ladner, Bryce Salles, Molly Freeman, and Brooke Ladner, from last year and this year.

Peyton Lee of Boots and Buckles gave the invocation. Dinner was then served. The guest speaker for the evening was Juliana Stolz, a former 4-H member from Madison County. Ms. Stolz spoke on her experiences in 4-H, what 4-H meant to her, and the program's advantages.

The presentation of pins and certificates followed. All members who attended meetings for the year were presented with a Participation Certificate and a 4-H Christmas ornament. Pins and Certificates were given out to those attending. A list of those receiving Certificates and pins are:

HANCOCK HIGH AP PHYSICS CLASS COMPETES IN STEAM UP

Keene Golding's AP Physics class at Hancock High recently completed a hands-on physics lesson by building steam engines during a two-week period and then running the engines at the 13th Annual International Steam Up competition held in Diamondhead. The seven Ruby steam engine kits, donated by the Accucraft train company and constructed by teams of 3 students, provided a unique opportunity for the AP Physics class to describe the physical laws involved in the construction and operation of a steam locomotive from concepts such as mechanics to heat transfer. Above: Hancock High AP Physics students Jamie Avant, Chayna Cosse, and Emily McCleskey (pictured left to right) prepare to run their team's steam engine during the 13th Annual International Steam Up competition.

Beauvoir's summer history camps scheduled

Beauvoir, The Jefferson Davis Home and Presidential Library will be hosting its eleventh annual summer history camps. Camps are open for children ages 8 to 13 and will run from June 6-10. Camps are 9 am to 1 pm each day, with a Parent's night on Friday evening.

Students will learn about various aspects of life in the nineteenth century by participating in many hands-on activities. Students can step back in time to experience life in a Confederate camp or learn the skills needed by a young woman of the times. The historic surroundings add to the fun of these summer history camps and at the end of each camp the students present a night for their parents, full of fun activities and presentations.

The Confederate Camp of Instruction will give boys a chance to experience the life of a Confederate soldier. They will become familiar with the uniforms, weapons and equipment; learn infantry and artillery drills and other hands-on activities such as cooking an authentic camp meal. June 6-10 from 9 am to 1 pm.

The Southern Charm School provides young ladies instruction in Victorian customs. They will learn about Southern etiquette, history, attire, local horticulture, art, dance, music and drama. June 6-10 from 9 am to 1 pm.

Visit Old Town Bay St. Louis for a very special Second Saturday

THE SEA COAST ECHO

On May 14, the artists and merchants of Old Town Bay St. Louis will be presenting good food, fine wine, excellent music and incredible art to the public during the Second Saturday Artwalk. While opening at their usual times on Saturday morning, the businesses in Old Town will keep their doors thrown wide open until 8 p.m. in celebration of the monthly event.

Unique to this month's Artwalk will be the 4 p.m. ribbon cutting to dedicate Serenity Place in honor of Jerry Dixon, former owner of Serenity Gallery. Now "Maggie May's-Exploring the World of Art," the building at 126 Main Street has been a constant source of delight for lovers of fine art for many years. Maggie May's is one of the "hot spots" for this month, and the featured artist at Maggie May's is printmaker Gwen Impson. Impson's exhibit will feature new and exciting work in fine art printmaking which incorporates a unique method of presentation. Impson will be on hand to discuss her techniques during the opening reception at Maggie May's from 5-8 p.m.

This month's other "hot spots" are Charbonnet and Charbonnet, located in the 200 block of Main Street, and Chessy's, which is located in the 100 block of South Beach Blvd. Charbonnet and Charbonnet will be having a huge tent sale during the Artwalk, and will also feature their new line of "coastal clothing" for ladies.

This is in addition to their collection of English and European country antiques, custom built furniture out of cypress and pine, and decorative home furnishings and gifts. Live music and refreshments will be available all along the 200 block of Main Street.

Featured artists at Chessy's include Mollie Hearin, Seanie Kohnke, Michelle Allee, Kat Fullilove, Pat Walker-Fields, and John Goodwyne. Chessy's is located at 110 South Beach Blvd, in a unique building which formerly housed a hardware store and which was later remodeled to resemble a home. New Age music and the aroma of scented candles will greet visitors to

Impson Monotype No. 6

Chessy's, where they will also find gifts, lamps, and furniture in addition to fine art.

Bobby Allison, arguably the most well loved of area musicians, will be gifting the Second Saturday crowds with his music. Allison will be performing songs from his ample repertoire on the 200 block of Main Street from 5-8 p.m.

His appearance during the Artwalk is courtesy of Peoples Bank. All of the artists and merchants of Old Town Bay St. Louis invite the public to join them for this lovely evening in the Bay.

7 p.m. on 8-FOX on 25-FOX
The Simpsons
 Ask the "American Idol" judges: Song choice is everything. Lisa (voice of Yeardley Smith) plans to sing "Mockingbird" in a talent competition, but another contestant (voice of Fantasia Barrino) does it better. Homer (voice of Dan Castellaneta) saves the day by composing an anthem about Springfield, which gives Lisa the edge she needs to win. He then appoints himself her manager but is so insufferable that Lisa fires him in the new episode "A Star Is Torn."

7 p.m. on 4-CBS
Cold Case
 Human bones are found in a truck retrieved from the river in the new episode "Best Friends." The vehicle is linked to a Prohibition-era bootlegger, and Rush and Valens (Kathryn Morris, Danny Pino) suspect the bones are those of his sister, who disappeared in 1932. But no, she's still alive, and Valens tracks her down and hears a scandalous-for-its-time story involving an interracial lesbian love triangle.

7 p.m. on 38-WB
Charmed
 Lots of children have imaginary friends, but little Wyatt's (Kristopher and Jason Simmons) invisible pal is real. He's a demon who's trying to win the boy over to the dark side. Piper (Holly Marie Combs) puts a spell on Wyatt so she can understand him, but instead conjures up a grown Wyatt (guest star Wes Ramsey), who kidnaps his baby self to keep the sisters from turning him good again.

8 p.m. on 8-FOX on 25-FOX
Family Guy
 Drew Barrymore lends her voice to the new episode "Fast Times at Buddy Cianci High," which steals its plot from the Pamela Smart case and the movie "To Die For." She voices Chris' attractive new teacher, who tells him they can hook up if he kills her husband. Lois finds out and teams with Stewie to cover up the scheme. Brian is also at the high school, counseling a class of troubled teens on career choices.

8 p.m. on 26-ABC on 13-ABC
Desperate Housewives
 Smitten pharmacist George Williams (guest star Roger Bart) is still hanging around trying to get closer to Bree (Marcia Cross) in the new episode "Sunday in the Park With George." Lynette (Felicity Huffman) is losing interest in her and tries to turn that around. Gabrielle's (Eva Longoria) love life takes another odd turn. Susan (Teri Hatcher) has unexpected company.

8 p.m. on 4-CBS
Movie: Elvis
 Jonathan Rhys Meyers ("Bend It Like Beckham") has the title role in this two-part biopic. Randy Quaid portrays Elvis' manager, "Colonel" Tom Parker, and Camryn Manheim and Robert Patrick play his parents. Rose McGowan and British newcomer Antonia Bernath play two of Elvis' love interests: Ann-Margret and Priscilla Beaulieu.

8 p.m. on 6-NBC
Law & Order: Criminal Intent
 Someone opens fire on a young actor (guest star Jeffrey Hephner) and his fiancée, killing her and wounding him. Goren and Eames (Vincent D'Onofrio, Kathryn Erbe) investigation leads them to a girlfriend-turned-stalker and the world of geocaching — scavenger hunting using global positioning technology.

9 p.m. on 6-NBC
Crossing Jordan
 Nigel (Steve Valentine) takes a special interest in a kidnapping case; the abductee is the daughter of his new love interest. He enlists Jordan's (Jill Hennessy) help in identifying and tracking down the kidnapper. Lily (Kathryn Hahn) gets a jolt when a homeless man awaiting autopsy turns out to be very much alive.

Sea Coast Echo

Tuesday Best Bets

7 p.m. on 26-ABC on 13-ABC

My Wife and Kids
The Kyles head for the Grand Canyon in a luxurious recreational vehicle. In the new episode "R.V. Dreams," it's Michael's (Damon Wayans) idea, and the others aren't crazy about the plan, but he takes them into it. Of course, he gets them into their share of trouble, from wrong turns to equipment malfunctions, along the way. Tisha Campbell-Martin, George O. Gore II, Jennifer Freeman and Parker McKenna Posey also star.

7 p.m. on 4-CBS

NCIS
The new episode "SWAK" recalls two real events from several years ago — the "I Love You" computer virus and the anthrax scare. A letter arrives "sealed with a kiss," and Tony (Michael Weatherly) assumes it's for him and opens it, releasing a powder that turns out to be a form of plague. Tony and Kate (Sasha Alexander) are quarantined while their colleagues search for the sender. Steven Eckholdt and Mariette Hartley guest star.

7 p.m. on 35-WB

Gilmore Girls
Lory (Alexis Bledel) receives her first performance review from Mr. Huntzberger (Gregg Henry), and the results take her by surprise. Kirk (Sean Gunn) puts in a bid for the Twickham house, which Luke (Scott Patterson) is trying to buy. Lorelai (Lauren Graham) worries about how Emily (Kelly Bishop) will react to the article about the inn. Sookie (Melissa McCarthy) goes into labor in the new episode "Blame Booze and Melville."

8 p.m. on 8-FOX on 25-FOX

House
House and the recently returned Cameron (Hugh Laurie, Jennifer Morrison) finally confront the issue that drove Cameron to leave the hospital: the latest medical mystery is a young Asian man who is suffering from blood clots and strokes. The team wonders if his sexual proclivities — he's into masochism — might be a factor in the new episode "Love Hurts."

8 p.m. on 4-CBS

The Amazing Race 7
The race is nearly run, and it's down to the wire. As the seventh-season finale of the globe-trotting game show opens, only three of the original 11 teams are left, and at the two-hour episode's end, only one will remain, and that lucky duo wins the $1 million prize. Phil Keoghan hosts.

8 p.m. on 35-WB

One Tree Hill
Nathan (James Lafferty), comatose after his racing accident, dreams about how his life might have turned out if "Dan" and Karen (Paul Johansson, Mo'Nique) had stayed together. In his dream, he's the disadvantaged one, while Lucas (Chad Michael Murray) is growing up with wealth and privilege.

8 p.m. on 4-CBS
age: Barbara Alyn Woods, Bethany Joy Lenz and Hilary Burton also star in the new episode "Lifetime Piling Up."

8 p.m. on 6-NBC

Scrubs
Residency is over, and the interns are ready for the next level in the new episode "My C-h-a-n-g-e." J.D. (Zach Braff) moves to a new place. Turk and Carla (Donald Faison, Judy Reyes) are thinking about a change of their own. One of the interns considers an offer from another hospital... Sarah Chalke and John C. McGinley also star.

8 p.m. on 54-UPN

Veronica Mars
Veronica (Kristen Bell) is about to find out who killed Lilly (Amanda Seyfried), but to get the information, she'll need to betray someone close to her. And once she has it, her own life will be in danger. Jake (guest star Kyle Secor) asks Duncan (Teddy Dunn) if he really wants to know what happened that night. Enrico Colaninno and Jason Doherty also star in the season finale, "Leave It to Beaver."

9 p.m. on 6-NBC

Law & Order: Special Victims Unit
Melinda Dillon ("Magnolia") guest stars as an unlikely key player in a drug-trafficking ring linked to an attack on a young mother. As Benson and Stabler (Mariska Hargitay, Chris Meloni) investigate, they learn she is being abused by her son (guest star Matt Schulze) and daughter-in-law... who soon turns up dead. After some persuasive talk from the detectives, she turns in her son in the new episode "Blood."

Star Trek: Enterprise
The newest small-screen incarnation of the sci-fi franchise comes to an end with a two-part story that details how the Federation was formed. In Part 1, "Terra Prime," Capt. Archer (Scott Bakula) and his crew go up against Paxton (guest star Peter Weller), a leader of the human isolationist movement, who wants all aliens off Earth and threatens to destroy Starfleet Command if that doesn't happen. Part 2 follows immediately.

A prison bus crashes, and two dangerous inmates manage to escape in the ensuing confusion. Don (Rob Morrow) knows something about finding fugitives, but as always, a little help from his math-whiz brother, Charlie (David Krumholtz), couldn't hurt. Sabrina Lloyd also stars in the new episode "Man Hunt."

7 p.m. on 8-FOX on 25-FOX
Movie: X-Men
The comic book comes to life in director Bryan Singer's dazzling 2000 adventure. Patrick Stewart plays the leader of gifted mutants, brought together to fight a criminal mastermind (Ian McKellen) and his own superpowered minions. Halle Berry, Hugh Jackman and Anna Paquin are on the side of the good guys, with Rebecca Romijn-Stamos as a particularly notable anomaly.

What I Like About You

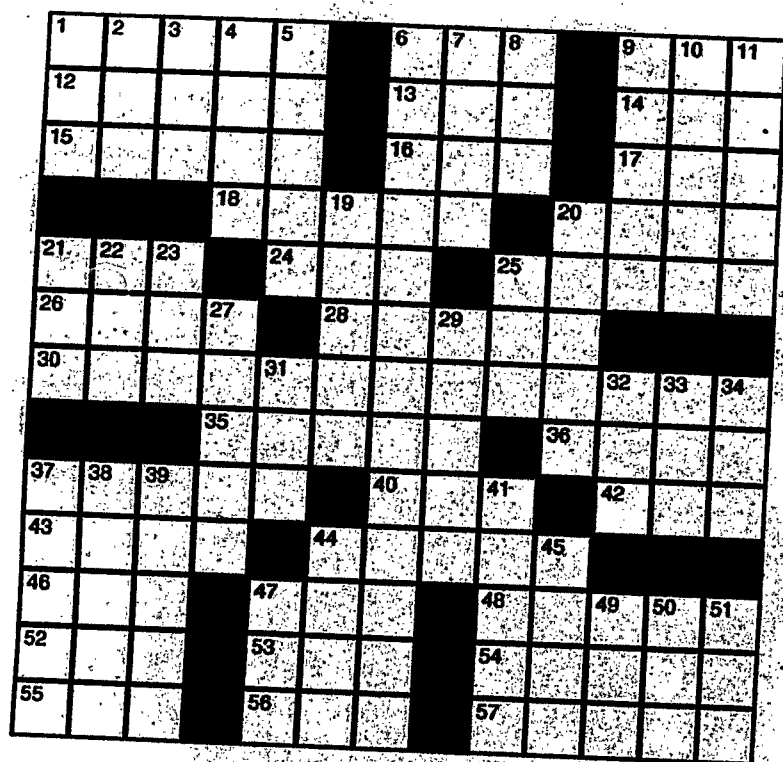

In the new episode "My Boyfriend's Back," Holly (Amanda Bynes) seeks advice from old flame Henry (guest star Michael McMillian) on improving her miserable track record with guys. Her sister (Jennie Garth) is on the receiving end of an attempt to revive her own love life, as Lauren (Leslie Grossman) lures Todd (guest star Luke Perry) back to the bakery.

In Focus

Sometimes, it's not enough just to be on camera, punching and kicking the daylights out of bad guys; you have to call the shots, too. Actress Jennifer Garner makes her directing debut on her ABC series, "Alias," Wednesday, May 11. Actors working both sides of the camera often try to stay lighter on the acting side, but it's likely Garner will remain prominent as agent Sydney since Arvin Sloane's impostor and Emily Sloane (guest stars Joel Grey and Amy Irving) are involved.

Timing is everything, which is a bit unfortunate for "Cuts" and "American Pie" actress Shannon Elizabeth, who recently announced her marital separation... and stars in a new Lifetime movie titled "Confessions of an American Bride," airing Monday, May 9. Her character is an advertising executive... initially... excited... about her boyfriend's (Eddie McClintock) marriage proposal but increasingly disenchanted with the minutiae of sharing lives.
